

AREFLH proposes concrete measures to the European Commission following the April frost episode.

Last Friday, 7th May, AREFLH, the Assembly of European Horticultural Regions, requested in a letter to Janusz Wojciechowski, European Commissioner for Agriculture, for an institutional reaction following the very serious damage suffered by the fruit and vegetable sector after the frost episode last April.

Besides the activation of the crisis reserve provided for by regulation 1306/2013, AREFLH made the following proposals :

- The possibility of increased aid for expenditure on frost-free and frost warning systems (up to 80% for this category, against the current 50% limit for the EU financial aid established by Article 34 (1) of Regulation 1308/2013.
- A single regulation to guarantee, in the calculations of the Fruit and Vegetable CMO Operational Plans, 85% of the value of marketed production of the crops affected in case of events causing a depreciation of at least 15%.
- The setting up of mutualisation funds aiming to limit the damage caused by frost in a forward-looking manner.

All AREFLH member regions having been hit hard by the frost episode, the association wished to voice the concerns of its producers and play a proactive role with the European Commission's DG Agri, by presenting these specific proposals which, according to the current legislation, can provide concrete and timely assistance to farmers.

Simona Caselli, President of AREFLH, declared: "Last April's frost affected all AREFLH member regions on a large scale, causing very significant damage. We are thus voicing the concerns of our producers and have decided to take an active role at the European Commission's DG AGRI, putting forward some specific proposals that, based on current regulations, we believe can bring concrete and timely aid to the farmers that have been so badly affected. Unfortunately, climate change is a reality that we are all committed to combating with sustainable good practices and innovation, but it also requires an adjustment of the tools to provide effective support to producers whose crops have been so badly damaged. While waiting for the new CAP rules currently under discussion at the Trialogues, we have asked Commissioner Wojciechowski - who has also recently spoken out in favour of European aid to affected farmers - to give an immediate signal to the sector by adopting all the support already possible: we therefore hope for a positive and timely response to our proposals."

AREFLH takes this opportunity to reaffirm its confidence in a rapid and effective response from Commissioner Wojciechowski and the institutions, and, while remaining at the disposal of the Commission's offices for any clarification or discussion, the association expects a punctual response to its proposals, which will help the sector to overcome this difficult moment.
